To our SCFA colleagues:

The issue of Online education is a burning and controversial topic and the SCFA believes that all views should be aired.

To this end, the SCFA Board urges you to attend this University sponsored event where panelists will tackle the big questions surrounding online education.

Participants include a variety of faculty and administrators, including Robert Meister, Chair of the Council of University of California Faculty Associations, with which SCFA is affiliated.

Discussion topics will include: How will the role of the professor change? What are the risks to faculty member's intellectual property? How will online courses be assessed, and who will determine the measures for success?

The event will be moderated by distinguished UCSC Alumna, Lois Kazakoff, Deputy Editor for the San Francisco Chronicle, Deputy Editor for the San Francisco Chronicle, (Cowell 1976)

Panelists:

Daphne Koller, Co-founder of Coursera,
Professor of Computer Science, Stanford University,

Robert Meister, Professor of History of Consciousness,
UCSC and SCFA member

Rodney Ogawa, Professor of Education

UCSC Alison Galloway, Campus Provost

Executive Vice Chancellor Matt Hong

UCSC Student Organization "New School" Moderated
